

STORY SYNOPSIS

Enter SUNNY CHOI, America's top-ranked b-girl. The short, 35-year-old Korean-American from Kentucky is an unlikely face for USA Breaking, but she is more than up to the challenge. As a seasoned veteran of the global breaking scene, Sunny knows she must push her body to its limits. She'll master new moves, defeat teenage rivals, and in the end, stand on that Olympic podium.

But at home and in therapy, Sunny confronts another battle: the depression and anxiety that have plagued her for years. Her road to history is one of self-discovery and personal growth. And as the world of breaking inevitably changes, so too will one of its brightest stars.

EXTERNAL BATTLE

Sunny travels the globe to compete in Olympic-qualifying battles where she faces stiff competition from China, France, Italy, etc. When Sunny started breaking 15 years ago, she was often the only woman competing against men. Now, in the blossoming b-girl circuit, rival b-girls are half her age.

She'll need to overcome the grueling schedule on the road to keep her aging body free from injury and in the hunt for gold. But as a former elite gymnast and Olympic hopeful, Sunny is built for the moment. She'll do what it takes for her one shot at glory.
